About this talk

When it comes to collaboration, we value the product over the process. And that's our biggest mistake. For most companies, prioritizing knowledge sharing is about as far from their current practices as they can get. In today's landscape, we don't value knowledge sharing if there's no immediate need for it. We keep it inside of our heads, and if we do communicate it, we simply treat it as the means to get to what matters: the result.

This way of thinking isn't just bogging down our communication process; it's also preventing us from capitalizing on our team's knowledge and learning from it, not repeating it.

Join us to learn why it's time to see your conversations as your most valuable data.

In this 30-minute webinar we'll cover:

- The cost of not treating your conversations as important
  - Why you need to start thinking of your conversations as data
  - How to find value in the process of collaboration as much as the end result
  - How to capture these conversations with digital tools that foster transparency and accountability
- This webinar is ideal for managers and team leaders who want to improve their team operations by streamlining communication and building on employee knowledge for better results.

Edwin (Ed) Zalewski Senior Editor - EHS J. J. Keller & Associates, Inc.

Edwin Zalewski is an EHS Editor at J. J. Keller & Associates, Inc. He researches and creates content for a variety of safety-related topics and contributes to a number of products. Edwin specializes in issues such as walking working surfaces, powered industrial trucks, and injury/illness record-keeping.

As a safety professional, you know how important training is. Pulling employees away from productive work can be hard, but the alternative—having untrained employees—just isn't an option. Training is critical to your employees' safety and your company's safety culture.

We know one of the most challenging areas for any EHS professional is safety training.

This webcast will discuss training in general, with a strong focus on:

- Challenges employers are facing,
- Best Practices that can be implemented, and
- Current trends in training that others are finding effective

We'll also reserve time for a live Q&A session - bring your questions!
